Charter Schools and Anti-Oppressive School Social Work Practice

A Live, Interactive Webinar

THURSDAY OCTOBER 7, 2021
10:30am-12:40pm EST

This course in general social work is designed to provide social work professionals with a clear understanding of what ethical social work practice can look like in a charter school setting.

Social workers: we have applied to ASWB ACE for consideration of CE credits for this course.

Target audience: Social Workers | Content level: Beginning

About the instructors:

Marina A. Badillo-Diaz, DSW, LCSW completed her Doctorate in Social Work at New York University's Silver School of Social Work in 2021. She graduated with a Master's of Science in Social Work in 2011 from Columbia University's School of Social Work and obtained her social work clinical licensure from New York State in February 2015. She is currently a social work consultant with MABDConsulting and an adjunct professor at CUNY City Tech teaching courses in human services, counseling & interviewing, leadership & management. She is also a youth development director and a clinical supervisor at an alternative high school in Brooklyn servicing students ages 15 to 21. Prior to this position, she was overseeing the social work department for grades K-8 at a middle and elementary school in East Harlem. She also acquired clinical social work experience in community mental health in Harlem for over 8 years.

She obtained a Post Graduate Clinical Supervisory Certification from Smith College for Social Work in 2017 and has over 8 years of experience providing clinical supervision for social work interns and social workers working towards their clinical licensure. Her interests and specialties include: school social work supervision, clinical licensure supervision, school social work ethics, school organization structure and leadership, social-emotional learning & programming, social work career coaching, and diversity, equity, and inclusion transformation for organizations.
